

Jason Curreri

Managing Counsel, Cyber and Professional Liability
Chubb

Jason Curreri is the Managing Counsel for cyber and professional liability at Chubb. In his role, Jason provides focused legal counsel regarding the creation and drafting of insurance contract language in connection with security and privacy laws and regulations worldwide, potential coverage issues, legal questions related to information safeguards and other unique cyber risks that prospective clients maintain.

Outside of his duties at Chubb, Jason currently serves on the CyberAcuView drafting committee and the cyber working group for The Genova Association where he advises on systemic risk, ransomware exposure and policy language.

Prior to joining Chubb, Jason was the Director of Product Counsel for Cyber, Financial Institutions and Professional Liability at CNA Financial and previously was product counsel at AIG. In these roles Jason helped build cyber policies and endorsements to meet market needs and responding to developing risk.

Jason is a graduate of Hofstra University and Seton Hall Law School; he currently lives in Ridgewood with his wife, and he serves on the Ridgewood Board of Adjustment.
