Maija Burtmanis is an Australian Legal/Compliance Life Sciences Executive, whose career has primarily been focused on the international markets. She has worked as a senior lawyer and compliance professional for companies such as Pfizer, Novartis and most recently, Shire BioPharma. She has extensive in-house experience in dealing with complex investigations (internal and external), audits, and high-level risk assessments, monitoring programs, commercial dispute resolution, and distribution arrangements, as well as resolving tricky and opaque compliance issues and regulatory matters.

Throughout her career, Ms. Burtmanis has worked with government representatives, industry groups, health care professionals, and external advisers in addressing a range of issues impacting life sciences companies that innovate, produce, and promote state-of-the-art pharmaceutical products, medical devices, vaccines, and diagnostic tools, as well as over-the-counter consumer products.

Ms. Burtmanis is an active legal/compliance industry professional, and is proud to be a faculty member of the annual Seton Hall APAC Compliance Officers training program, which takes place in Singapore every year. She very much enjoys her vocation and loves the daily challenges presented by an industry that seeks to serve patients and the health care community above all else.
