PARTNERSHIP WITH LAW ENFORCEMENT

Police Diversion

- Police Diversion Programs enable police to offer eligible persons, apprehended for minor drug offenses and low-level crimes, an opportunity to attend and complete treatment rather than going to jail.
- Police use their discretion regarding suspected opiate addicted individuals and can intervene at the time of arrest or before a crime is committed.
- Police can use their training, expertise and experience to screen individuals and identify those who are appropriate for treatment rather than incarceration.

Lifeline - Our Mission

- To help reduce the impact of substance abuse and dependence in our communities.
- Encourage those who suffer from substance use disorders to seek help and experience recovery.
- To offer compassion, care, and hope for those individuals struggling with addiction.
- To provide those suffering from addiction resources to assist in their recovery.

The Process

STEP 1 - DETAINMENT

What do candidates look like?

As the Law Enforcement Community knows, individuals suffering from a substance abuse disorder (S.U.D) can be difficult to work with.

Individuals may be withdrawing from drugs or alcohol and may initially be anxious or uncooperative.

Individuals abusing substances may also have simple possession charges, low-level offenses, or other outstanding legal issues.

The intervention of Law Enforcement at this crucial juncture can make the difference in getting these individuals into successful treatment.

The Process

STEP 2 - CONTACT RECOVERY SUPPORT SERVICES

A call is placed to Lifeline Recovery Support Services
(1-888-520-0040)

A Peer Recovery Specialist is deployed and responds within the hour - to wherever the incident has occurred.

Law enforcement holds the individual and waits for the Certified Peer Recovery Specialist to arrive.

The Process

STEP 3 - RECOVERY SPECIALIST ON-SITE

The Recovery Specialist meets the candidate in the designated area of the Police Station.

A Peer Recovery Specialist provides recovery support services to the affected person suffering from a substance abuse disorder.

The Peer Recovery Specialist works with the client and Recovery Services to develop and execute a plan for treatment.

Lifeline Recovery Support Services

Peer Recovery Specialists help guide the individual to the appropriate level of care.

Certified Peer
Recovery Specialist

Recovery Support Services

Peer Recovery Specialists guide the patient thru the treatment process and are there to assist with the clinical and peer support that is so essential to a person suffering from substance use disorder.

Recovery Support Services

Peer Recovery Specialists help individuals transition from treatment and back into whatever path of recovery they have chosen.

Recovery Specialist Deployment

The Peer Recovery Specialist has the ability to be deployed to police departments 24/7 when the individual is at their most vulnerable point.

Recovery Specialist Program

The Peer Recovery Specialist Program runs at a 60 to 70% success rate when executed with the proper partnerships.
