Adriana Fussuma is a seasoned senior compliance executive with over two decades of expertise in the ethics, compliance, and anti-corruption laws within the healthcare sector. Her strategic acumen has consistently fostered ethical and sustainable growth within global leading healthcare corporations, ensuring the highest standards of ethical conduct.

Throughout her career, she has been leading the establishment and transformation of compliance teams with varying structures, maturity levels and different corporate cultures. She holds solid experience in orchestrating comprehensive global corporate compliance frameworks, precisely aligns processes, controls, risk management protocols, audits, and monitoring strategies, among other activities, according to local regulations and the ever-evolving dynamics of the healthcare sector.

Beyond her corporate leadership, Adriana possesses extensive expertise in supporting companies during major anti-corruption and anti-trust investigations. She is also highly proficient in ensuring compliance programs to ensure anti-corruption settlements requirements from the U.S. Department of Justice and other related anti-corruption authorities.

Furthermore, Adriana has been an active contributor to pivotal ethics and compliance collective actions across Latin America that have fostered awareness and discussions around business ethics in the healthcare sector. Her collaborations with international stakeholders and diverse trade associations have yielded notable results and advancements.
