Giuseppe Falbo started his career with the Italian economic police—seconded also to a Prosecutor’s Office—investigating commercial and bank frauds, corruption cases, and environmental crimes. He later joined the U.S. Secret Service working on transnational investigations (United States, South/East Europe, and MEA), bank, commercial, and credit card frauds, counterfeit U.S. dollars, and cybercrimes, in addition to protective assignments. He joined Kroll in London, where he worked on complex investigations and due diligences worldwide and consulted on anti-fraud matters. He later founded a business intelligence and investigation company in London (Hawk Global).

Mr. Falbo joined the health care industry in Switzerland, where he was responsible for the misconduct handling process across all the Novartis Divisions in Asia, Middle East, Africa, and Latin America. He then moved with Alcon in Singapore, where he was the first Regional Compliance Director for Asia & Russia, guiding the Leadership team and the Country General Managers in putting together a more solid compliance framework and raising the overall culture of Ethics & Compliance in the region. He joined Shire in October 2017, as Regional Compliance Head, to continue to improve the compliance framework and capabilities in one of the most dynamic regions in the company. Since Takeda acquired Shire, he is the Takeda Global Head of Ethics & Compliance Investigation.
