Stephanie McMorrow

Senior Managing Director, Global Chief Privacy, Records & Information Officer
TIAA

Stephanie brings more than 20 years of audit, risk, and compliance experience across global financial services, with deep expertise in privacy, AI governance, and cybersecurity compliance. She is TIAA's Global Chief Privacy and Records Officer, and previously served as Global Chief Privacy Officer and Head of Global Data Compliance at Prudential Financial.

She leads the enterprise data privacy, records & information compliance strategy, partnering with stakeholders across AI, cybersecurity, and data to transform the organization's compliance programs into a scalable, by-design model. Working closely with senior leaders and cross-functional teams, she strengthens risk transparency and drives effective business outcomes, advancing governance, regulatory readiness, and responsible data practices. Her work supports a clear mission: to protect, strengthen, and enable data compliance. That means safeguarding institutions, clients, and consumers, building frameworks that keep leadership and Boards informed, and enabling smart, and responsible innovation.

Beyond her corporate leadership, Stephanie is active in board and advisory work. She serves as Trustee and Audit Committee Chair for The Washington Center and advises institutions on risk and data compliance, including initiatives at Seton Hall Law School and the American College Alliance for Ethics in Financial Services.
