Joe Webster is the managing partner of Hobbs, Straus, Dean & Walker, which is a national law firm dedicated to promoting and defending tribal rights. Joe, who is based in the firm's DC office, is recognized for his knowledge of and experience in tribal rights under the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act. He has represented a number of tribes in successful compact negotiations. In 2021 he represented the Seminole Tribe in the negotiation of a new ground-breaking compact with the State of Florida, which allows the Tribe to offer state-wide mobile sports betting. He is representing the Tribe in both federal and state litigation challenging the validity of the compact and the implementing state law.
